A portrait of three extraordinary vocal artists visualized in the breath-taking environment of their homecountry and the Swiss mountains. Christian Zehnder, Noldi Alder and Erika Stucky have chosen different ways to evolve and incorporate the musical traditions of their country into their work. What they have in common though is the sonic universe they create which goes far beyond of what is usually understood as singing, including yodeling, scat-vocalization and overtone-singing. We learn that landscapes generate certain styles and techniques of singing, and that the art of vocalization in Mongolia relates to that in Switzerland. Christian Zehnder´s travels lead him to Tuva, where he sits in and improvises with the renowned overtone-vocalist Huun Huur Tu.
